

Specifications are not independent (several indicators are strongly correlated) and pool sizes differ across scope definitions, so effects are not directly comparable across rows; the binomial share is descriptive only.